

We have hit mid-calendar year and have accomplished considerable things. The Sons of the Revolution continues to maintain its primary focus on preserving and honoring the memories of our Revolutionary War patriot-ancestors and the Cause for which they sacrificed. From Delaware to South Carolina to Missouri, the SR is making an impact on our children's education by sponsoring the purchase of key resources and by self-publishing our own educational creations for distribution.

But, as you may know, the book programs aren't the only way the SR continues to educate the public. The recent historical markers posted throughout the Brandywine Battlefield Park sponsored by the PSSR and its Color Guard, and the General Society's support of Civics Fundamentals with Judge Douglas Ginsburg, are excellent examples of how we walk our talk. Civics education goes hand-in-hand with early American history. If we fail to push Civics from coast to coast and border to border, we fail as Sons.

That's why it pleases me to see young people writing prize-winning essays sponsored by our Societies on the importance of the Constitution (see pp. 9-10) and other related topics. I commend Dylan Donigan of Florida and Anusha Cargool of North Carolina, two exemplary students. I also commend our newest member-Society, the South Atlantic Society, based in Palm Beach, Florida, for their first half-year of operations. They hit the ground running, and I have faith they will excel in their activities and membership growth (see pp. 7-8).

The Society of '83 has, thus far from its inception, raised in excess of $80,000. All of you should be proud of that. It is remarkable the amount of good that can come from volunteerism. With a portion of those monies, the General Society has committed to preservation efforts at Historic Halifax in North Carolina, the James Monroe birthplace in Virginia, and to remembering Purple Heart veterans in Kentucky (see pp.21-22, 26). We also are organizing a new Patriots Monument Fund. More information on that will be coming soon.

Regarding our new member-Societies, I am pleased to report that activity is stirring in New Hampshire, thanks to the efforts of Past Region 1 Vice President Hans Jackson. One person's dedicated efforts can make a big difference, and we look forward to further developments there.

The second half of this year will feature our BOM Meeting in Williamsburg. This arrangement is a prudent, economical choice that will help us recoup some of the expenses from the previous BOM (see pp. 5-6). I look forward to our Triennial Meeting in 2024 in Philadelphia. It is appropriate to hold our next Triennial in the City of Brotherly Love, as so much incredible history happened there 250 years ago.

On a final note, I would like to thank our editor, David Swafford, graphic artist Rick Ross, and proofreader Sharon Toms, for their hard work in shepherding this issue of the SONS Drumbeat.

etter from the Asst. General Chaplain:

The Rev. Dr. Augustus 'Gus' E. Succop III

It is a complete understatement to suggest we live in challenging times. Between the mass shootings and senseless killings that seem to continue unabated, the indictment of the former president, the son of the current president under media scrutiny, and the lingering memory of the events of January 6, 2021, our nation has been sorely tested of late.

Oftentimes in the past couple of years, I have asked myself, What would our patriotic ancestors tell us at this particular hour? How would our ancestors advise us, if not comfort us? How might they ease our worry over the future of our republic and our democratic society?

Gus Succop

I firmly believe their response would be, "It's up to each of you." It really is up to each one of us. This hearkens back to the response Benjamin Franklin gave to Philadelphian socialite Elizabeth Willing Powel when she asked him on the last day of the Constitutional Convention – September 18, 1787 – whether the delegates had formed a republic or a monarchy. He replied, "A republic, if you can keep it." That was a big if back then, just as it is today. In fact, it will remain a big if for all generations that follow us.

However, our ancestors would not stop there. They would continue by reminding us that the experiment entitled "The United States of America" is no mere accident. The fifty states that make up our nation, formed for the sake of unity, not uniformity, are not a mere human triumph over tyranny or chaos; rather, the United States is a triumphal act of God. In his book 1776, historian David McCullough concludes his look at that pivotal year of the Revolution with these insightful words: "Especially for those who had been with Washington and who knew what a close call it was at the beginning – how often circumstance, storms, contrary winds, the oddities or strengths of individual character had made the difference – the outcome seemed little short of a miracle."

I once had the opportunity to ask David McCullough if in using the word "miracle" he was using it metaphorically or did he intend the original meaning of the

OF HONOR,
O, SPIRIT
OF PEACE,
UNTH A VIGIL WHICH NEVER

word to prevail. That is, did he honestly believe the nation is a miraculous act of God? Mr. McCullough smiled and replied, "You of all people should know I was not using the word metaphorically." Having been trained theologically, I returned his smile and gave thanks again for the miracle we embrace as a nation.

Aside from "miracle," there is another word that is essential for understanding the responsibility placed upon every patriot and that is incumbent to every faith-possessing citizen. That word is vigilance. "Vigilance" means to keep a careful watch upon our republic for present dangers or possible difficulties, whether internal or external. A more spiritual meaning of the word would be to assume a reverence and solemnity for our country, holding a quiet vigil in the heart of our hearts for all that this grand experiment represents.

Tea Lights Vigil

We must not assume the American experiment is manageable, much less possible, when citizens and leaders divorce themselves from God's blessing and the out-pouring of divine wisdom. When we cease to be vigilant in bearing a patriotic witness and when we fail to be active citizens in the divine enterprise, we will most assuredly reap the fruits of a justified if not a cruel captivity. It could come at the hands of some outside enemy or even through the machinations of a self-imposed ignorance, or worse, self-induced lethargy.

Make no mistake, our ancestors would take seriously our collective concern for our nation's present-day tribulations, but they would be quick to remind us that we Americans come from seasoned, tested, and hearty stock. To be an American means to believe our unity as a republic is non-negotiable, that the journey we endure and enjoy together is intended to test us beyond every logical limit. It requires faith, as much faith in your neighbor as faith in yourself and faith in the Lord. And yet, the miracle continues, and some would even go so far as to suggest that "those who wait for the Lord shall renew their strength, they shall mount up with wings like eagles, they shall run and not be weary, they shall walk and not faint" (Isaiah 40: 31).

To that end, it is imperative we remain ever vigilant in bearing our patriotic witness, and why? So our descendants, our sons and our daughters 250 years from now, may be inspired to keep the light of faith and freedom ever bright, ever bold, and ever alive as one nation under God.

Inaugural Activities Include Essay Awards

Members of the newly formed South Atlantic Society gathered for their inaugural meeting on Wednesday, January 19th, at the Sailfish Club of Florida in Palm Beach. New officers were installed, with William B. Richards serving as President; Edward Gynn, 1st VP; Joseph Meyer, 2nd VP; Louis Allen Carmichael, 3rd VP; Reeve Bright, Secretary; Donald Liddell Twiss, Treasurer; Powell S. Thomas, Jr., Registrar; David Blackwell Lowe, Chaplain; Chips Chapman Page, Color Guard Captain, John Black McGowan, Jr., Historian, and Joseph A. McChristian, Jr., Past President.

At-Large Board members include William Douglas Parmelee, Andre Bernard Cook, Jackie Dean Miller I, and Thomas C. Krumenacker.

The highlight of the luncheon was a very interesting and informative talk given by General Society Secretary Ambrose Richardson on the significance of Fraunces Tavern and the role it played during the Revolutionary War. Ambrose is a Past President of the New York Society, which owns the Fraunces Tavern. The winter luncheon meeting was followed by a meeting in March and another held in April. The latter event was another luncheon meeting, where forty members and guests convened in Hobe Sound at the Hobe Sound Yacht Club. We awarded rosettes to new members and military service pins to those in attendance who served.

A few days before the April event, SA-SR officers visited the Oxbridge Academy, an independent 6-12 school in Palm Beach County, to announce the winners of the 2023 Sons of the Revolution Essay Contest amongst 10th graders. A total of thirty-two sophomores submitted essays this year. The annually sponsored contest was established at Oxbridge four years ago by the Palm Beach Chapter, predecessor of the South Atlantic Society. This year, first place went to Dylan Donigan, second place to Arthur Paura, and third place to Hannah Famulak. Thirty-two sophomores submitted essays.

Dylan and his mother were guests at the April luncheon meeting, where President Bill Richards read Dylan's essay aloud. The topic was: "What does the Constitution mean to me?" (See pp. 9-13 for recent winning student essays from within the GSSR.)

Winning Essays

Periodically we publish winning student essays from across the GSSR. If your Society sponsors an essay contest and Society leadership would like to see it published, please send it to the SONS Drumbeat for inclusion. We reserve the right to schedule these essays as space permits. In this issue, we are fortunate to be running two fine essays, including "What the Constitution Means to Me," by Dylan Donigan, a student of Oxbridge Academy of Palm Beach County, Florida, who competed in the South Atlantic Society's contest. We also have "Roles of North Carolinian Women during the Revolutionary Era," by Anusha Kargool, a student of Central Piedmont Community College in Charlotte, North Carolina, who competed in the contest of the General Wm. Lee Davidson Chapter of SRNC.—Ed.

What the Constitution Means to Me

By Dylan Donigan

What the Constitution means to me is a question that brings me to my knees. I want to scream: FREEDOM, PRIVILEGE, OPPORTUNITY and RIGHTS. The Founding Fathers were not perfect but created this living document, The Constitution of the United States, in such a way that it continues to be as relevant today as it was in 1787. It acts as the foundation for this great and beautiful nation. The Constitution entitles every American, including myself: freedom, equal rights, opportunity, and the privilege to make our own decisions without the government controlling or dictating our every move.

To be an American citizen in the United States in 2023, it gives me great pride, purpose, and a life of equality and liberty. When I think about the start of our country, I think about the inequalities as it pertains to the chains of slavery. I would be remiss without addressing that one might think that the Constitution had no regard to the enslaved. This gives me great pause. What continues to astonish me is the way in which these Founding Fathers: a group of white, educated men with meaningful intentions, did not bear the burden of eliminating slavery. When in fact, they had to make a sacrificial compromise to keep the union together. I marvel at their ingenuity. They had the foresight to allow adaptability to the Constitution. Fortunately, the strategic way in which they composed the most important living document, allowed for change and amendments. This came to fruition when Abraham Lincoln signed the 13th Amendment abolishing slavery. I am proud to be a part of a nation that rights its wrongs. It is extraordinary to me that the amendments have all moved morally forward. This formidable empowerment is why I absolutely love the Constitution.

The freedom I was born with, and afforded as an American citizen is an incredible privilege. The First Amendment gives Americans five essential freedoms: the freedom of speech, press, petition, assembly, and religion. I have the right to live a free life that my brothers and sisters in other countries plainly don't get, where citizens can be persecuted for their opinions. The Honorable Sandra Day O'Connor said, "It is quite simply, the most powerful vision of freedom ever expressed" (constitutioncenter.org). My Constitution protects my freedom where it is written, "We the People of the United States... Secure the Blessings of Liberty to ourselves and our Posterity (Preamble)." My Constitution mandates a Government that serves me. The Legislative, Executive, and Judicial branches were all designed to make laws that protect my rights. The "checks" and "balances" secure accountability. I have endless opportunities to go to school and pursue my interests. I have opportunities to work hard and achieve greatness, being the best person I can be. I consider it remarkable that I have the right to practice my religion, while my friends have the right to practice theirs. I have the right to live without discrimination or bias because of my gender. I'm very excited that in a few years I will have the right to vote.

North Carolinian Women

During the Revolutionary Era

By Anusha Kargool

Penelope Barker, early female North Carolinian activist. In 1774, she organized a historical (documented) boycott of English tea among fifty-one women.

From the beginning of humanity itself, women have been known to be the caretakers of the household. Through almost every culture, women are raised to be mothers and wives whose only purpose is to care for their husband or children. In fact, at the beginning of the 20th century itself, women legally belonged to their husbands because of the patriarchal institution that was set in place from the very creation of America. However, as the years go by, women are becoming more and more independent, learning that they have their own potential and do not just belong in the house. In fact, during the Revolutionary War, women in North Carolina played multiple key roles in maintaining the household and taking over the money-making area of the family.

Backtracking to before the war, the French and Indian War was taking place. According to Governor Robert Dinwiddie, a British colonial administrator who became governor of Virginia, "As our Enemies, the Fr., are now in Arms to dispossess You of Y'r huntington Grounds on the River Ohio, and threaten Vengence ag'st You and all the Fr'dly Ind's of the English, I am now raising Forces." (Dinwiddie) This shows that, contrary to the name of the war, the French and Indian war was mainly between that of Britain and France to take over American grounds. Keep in mind that during these times, women were primarily involved in taking care of the children, cooking for their families, and making sure their household was comfortable and clean for any visitors.

According to the Lloyd Sealy Library, "The end result of the war was the expansion of the British Empire especially in North America, where almost all French territory (everything from the Appalachian Mountains to the Mississippi river) was ceded to British control." (American History) At the beginning of British control, the American colonists were at peace and did not mind the change in rulership. Everything was going fine until the British realized that they still had to pay off war debts from the recent French and Indian War. So, as a result, the British started to place taxes on the American colonies they were controlling so that it would help their financial situation. This marked the turning point of a woman's traditional role in society.

The British placed taxes on many common goods from printed materials, with the Stamp Act, to tea, with the Tea Act. The King and the Parliament believed they had the right to put these taxes on the Colonies because they gained control over their land. The colonists, however, were enraged by these sudden acts. They started to protest against the unjust acts which led to more violence between the British and American forces. With this came the beginning of the Revolutionary War, a war fought to regain independence from the British.

As the war became more vast and dangerous, the army started to draft more and more men to fight against the impending British forces. With the men, the ones who were in charge of providing the financial support for the family, being gone to fight, it was becoming difficult for women to sustain themselves and their children. Moreover, because of the war, inflation peaked at around 30 percent. This is because in exchange for covering the costs of the war, including weapons and supplies, Congress decided to print more paper money. With more printing of money, the less value the money had. Even further, there were shortages in food and resources for the colonists. Since men had been in charge of farming and providing food for the community, there was a scarcity in crops. This is when the role of colonial women during the war became important. As the men fought for freedom, women at home took over the manual labor. For instance, many women began to take an interest in farming operations and cultivating land.

In addition, they helped to heal wounded soldiers and boycott against common English goods to avoid further funding the English. In fact, according to the North Carolina Department of Natural and Cultural Resources, "On October 25, 1774, women in Edenton resolved to stop buying English tea and cloth to protest taxation without representation." (Women of Edenton) In other words, 51 women in North Carolina agreed to not participate in drinking English tea to demonstrate their patriotism along with displeasure of the actions of the British. Unfortunately, on January 16, 1775, a London newspaper called Morning Chronicle and London Advertiser mocked the women's engagement in politics. Around two months later, according to the Library of Congress, political cartoons were made portraying the women with masculine, non-appealing features, and drinking from punch bowls which are usually used by men at social gatherings (A Society of Patriotic Ladies). This ripple of actions showed how many people disapproved of the rapidly changing roles of women. Nevertheless, this increasing range of jobs women had brought about a change in the way women saw themselves in society.

This wave of feminism and change throughout the states resulted in women's education becoming more common. In fact, according to Terrell A. Crow, about 300 academies were founded in North Carolina to accommodate female students (Crow). Although mainly white women from wealthy families were given education, this spur of change was an entryway for many more women of different backgrounds to be given the same opportunities. Not only did these educational advancements allow women to be properly taught, it also enhanced female empowerment even more by giving educated women opportunities in jobs requiring knowledge on subjects regarding math, history, and literature.

As women became more engaged in politics, multiple organizations dedicated to empowering women were brought about. According to Anastatia Sims in her book titled The Power of Femininity in the New South: Women's Organizations and Politics, after the Revolutionary War ended, "All of the major women's patriotic societies—the Colonial Dames, the United Daughters of the Confederacy, the Daughters of the American Revolution...—established chapters in North Carolina." (Sims) These organizations eventually led to the opening of eyes to how power

"Aunt Nancy Hart Captures the Tories," from Stories of Georgia (1896), by Joel Chandler Harris. Nancy Hart was an imposing woman who staunchly supported the Whig cause at her home in Elbert County, Georgia. She is said to have captured various Tories and turned them over to the Whig militia.

ful women are and how they deserve to be included in roles that were typically given to men.

However, not every woman had the privilege of education and a stable financial status. Many were slaves or indentured servants and lived most of their life under control of a male master. Many women were abused, sexually assaulted, and harassed during their servitude. In fact, women who gave birth during their servitude had years added onto their service time. Fortunately, some female indentured servants were given grants of land after their contracts ended. After being liberated, they used these grants of land to farm crops for a living.

In conclusion, the role given to colonial women in North Carolina during the Revolutionary Era was an important one. With their participation in the ongoing war, politics, and control over their husbands' jobs, changed the way society viewed careers that women were intended to have. Ultimately, their involvement in the war was a gateway for an everlasting equality amongst men and women in not only jobs, but [in] respect and appreciation as well.

The Sons of the Revolution in North Carolina, as a means to underscore the continued importance of the Halifax Resolves, "resolved" at its June 2022 Annual Meeting to create a partnership with the Friends of Historic Halifax to further advance restoration initiatives there.

The General Society determined to support this project as well, with funding from the Society of '83. General President Russell P, Rich traveled to Historic Halifax to tour the State Historic Site. The area contains thirty-nine properties on the National Register of Historic Places.

"Besides giving financial support to the Friends of Historic Halifax," said Society President Gus Succop, "we mean to generate a wider awareness of the Resolves in our membership and through our membership to the public at large."

Congress. In his 1918 History of Halifax County, W. C. Allen reports, "...throughout the colonial and Revolutionary periods, as well as the years since, Halifax County has played a conspicuous part in the stirring events that have made North Carolina history so interesting."

Resolved...

On April 12, 1776, during its fourth session, the Provincial Congress convened in Halifax and adopted the Halifax Resolves. The Resolves were the first organized action by one of the Colonies to call for national, or republic-wide, independence. Thereafter, N.C. delegates to the Second Continental Congress (Joseph Hewes, William Hooper, and John Penn) submitted a copy of the Provincial Congress' meeting minutes, which included the Resolves, to Congressional President John Hancock. They also verbally encouraged their colleagues in Philadelphia to move for the complete independence of all thirteen states and to seek alliances with overseas powers.

The presentation of the Resolves to Congress, indeed, must have influenced the delegates. Nearly three months later, the Declaration of Independence was signed (ratified) by fifty-six Congressmen and published repeatedly.

Toward Independence

The adoption of the Halifax Resolves came after a crucial patriot victory in North Carolina earlier that year at Moore's Creek Bridge, near Wilmington. It also followed Royal Governor Josiah Martin's late May abandonment of the state. By the time the Provincial Congress met in Halifax, there was widespread recognition across North Carolina that the patriot Cause was strengthening and was even now foreordained.

"After the Battle of Moore's Creek Bridge [February 27, 1776]," writes W. C. Allen, "sentiment in North Carolina for independence rapidly crystallized. Although a British army of invasion and twenty-seven enemy gunboats were on the Cape Fear, the people of the province set their faces steadfastly toward a separation from England. In Halifax County, the spirit of the revolution was [by that time] unchecked."

That same year, North Carolina approved another issuance of state currency. Author and historian Bob Schreiner indicates the 1776 issuance featured seventeen different denominations of N.C. bills, from 1/16 dollar through twenty dollars. The $7.50 bill (shown to the left) featured the unfurled Grand Union flag on the lower left of its design. This was one of the first national flags flown throughout the Thirteen Colonies.

Other Historical Facts

The town of Halifax was established on November 21, 1757, on lands owned by James Leslie. It was named in honor of George Montagu, the second Earl of Halifax and President of the British Board of Trade and Plantations. At that time, the Board served as the foreign policy arm of the British government. Halifax prospered so much that the following year a new county was created by the same name, and the town served as county seat. By 1769, Halifax had nearly sixty houses and public buildings.

In 1781, Cornwallis occupied the town briefly while on his way northward to Yorktown. He stayed at the Eagle Tavern, which is one of the restored edifices in Historical Halifax today. Ten years later, George Washington visited the town on his tour of the Southern states, but did not spend the night there. Forty-four years after Cornwallis overnighted there, so did the Marquis de Lafayette on his return journey to the U.S. The town remained prosperous until the late 1830s, when the new Wilmington & Weldon Railroad bypassed it.

Eagle Tavern, built in the 1790s

Notwithstanding, Halifax played an important role in the Underground Railroad of the mid-nineteenth century. The National Park Service has recognized three sites along the Roanoke River as verifiable sites of the Underground Railroad, including one located within the boundaries of the Historic Halifax State Historic Site. On David St., markers leading to the river tell the story of "Runaways" who were pursued through nineteenth-century newspaper ads. The other sites are located along the river in nearby Roanoke Rapids and Weldon.—Editor

From Caterpillar to Butterfly: Rebuilding the Birthplace Home of James Monroe

Fifth President of the United States, 1817 - 1825

On April 22nd, members of the Virginia Society Sons of the Revolution attended the 265th Birthday Celebration Ceremony of the nation's Fifth President at the newly opened James Monroe Birthplace and Park in Westmoreland County, Virginia, near the town of Colonial Beach. The event was sponsored by the James Monroe Memorial Foundation, which the VSSR has supported with assistance from the Society of '83.

The spring ceremony was the first heavily attended public event at the restored home, following the completion of the project and dissipation of Covid concerns. The home, which the Foundation had to completely rebuild from the ground up, opened in October 2021. The project was a ten-year endeavor of planning and fundraising. In 2005, the Foundation obtained a 99-year lease on the land from Westmoreland County to build a replica of Monroe's childhood home. Monroe was President from March 4, 1817, to March 4, 1825, the last of the "Virginia Dynasty."

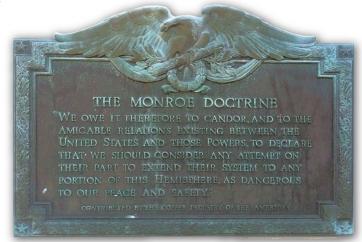

At the 2021 opening event, according to a report in The Free-Lance Star newspaper, Colonial Beach Mayor Robin Shick spoke of a time during her childhood when her father stopped next to the site of the former President's boyhood home to fix a flat tire. Nothing was there except some gravel on the ground and an old sign. As her father changed the tire, she found a caterpillar and took it with her to school. "As that caterpillar eventually became a butterfly, so, too, have these grounds evolved from a caterpillar into a beautiful butterfly."

Career Accomplishments

After fighting with distinction in the Continental Army, Monroe resigned his commission and joined the Virginia militia. He later studied law under Thomas Jefferson and practiced law in Fredericksburg. He was named to the Virginia Convention to ratify the US Constitution, where he sided with the anti-Federalists. He would go on to serve multiple terms as Governor of Virginia. He was also appointed Ambassador to France and later to Britain. In the administration of James Madison, he became the only person in US history to fill two cabinet posts simultaneously: Secretary of State and Secretary of War. In 1803, he and Robert R. Livingston negotiated the purchase of the Louisiana Territory from Napoleon Bonaparte.

According to his White House biography, Monroe's ambition and energy, and his support from President Madison, made him the Republic choice for the Presidency in 1816. He won re-election virtually unopposed in 1820. Major achievements during his terms included the Treaty of 1818, the Adams-Onis Treaty, and the Missouri Compromise. He is most remembered for the Monroe Doctrine, which forbade European countries from meddling in the affairs of newly independent nations of the Western Hemisphere.

The Monroe Doctrine was issued on December 2, 1823, and is one of the earliest tenets of US foreign policy.

Teardrop Memorials in Kentucky

part of the 10th

KYSR Treasurer Dan Miller receives a ceremonial folded flag from the SAR. Dan is a descendant of the Mountjoy family.

Over the last two years, the KYSR with funding from the Society of '83 has joined with the KYSSAR to sponsor two Purple Heart Teardrop Memorials. They are located in the north-central area of the state. KYSR historian and Chapter President Jackie Miller envisioned the projects and led them to fruition. The first of these, installed in September 2021, is located in Falmouth, Pendleton County. The second is about half an hour west by car, in Williamstown, on the Grant-Pendleton county line.

The Falmouth memorial was dedicated to the memory of two Revolutionary-era patriot brothers, John and Alvin Mountjoy, who were instrumental in settling the area. Capt. John saw action at Trenton, Brandywine, and Monmouth as

Virginia. Lt. Alvin served in the 3rd Virginia and saw action at Princeton, Germantown, and Brandywine. Alvin Mountjoy later helped determine the original location of the Falmouth County courthouse. His log cabin was built circa 1790 and is Falmouth's oldest standing structure. KYSR Treasurer Dan Miller is a descendant of the Mountjoys and gave a speech on behalf of the family at the memorial dedication ceremony. #### Monument Installed in Williamstown

SR, SAR, and DAR members gather at the memorial unveiling in Williamstown. KYSR Historian Jackie Miller, seated center, conceived the two projects.

In January 2023, the KYSR with assistance from the Society of '83 co-sponored with the SAR and the DAR placement of a Purple Heart Teardrop Monument in downtown Williamstown. The memorial honors all Purple Heart veterans from the area, dating back to the Revolution. It was dedicated to the memory of revolutionary-era veteran Maj. William Arnold who was the founder of Williamstown. It was after him that the town was named (using his first name).

A native of East Jersey, Arnold was born in 1764 and later relocated to Virginia. By 1780, at 16 years of age, he volunteered for the Virginia Line and saw action in the Southern Campaign. He was part of Lafayette's division of Virginia Continentals in the spring and summer of 1781, suffering an injury at Yorktown.

Washington Statue Resurrected

m T}$ wo years ago, following the tragic death of George Floyd, vandals across the country began defacing and, in some instances, toppling statues of George Washington. Statues were vandalized in Baltimore, Chicago, Portland, and Los Angeles. This likeness of Washington, left, in downtown Los Angeles was defaced with red paint and torn from its base. It is one of the original thirty bronze copies made from Jean-Antoine Houdon's granite likeness of Washington, which stands in the rotunda of the Virginia State Capitol in Richmond.

Following that incident, the County of Los Angeles retrieved the statue, cleaned it up, and temporarily stored it in the basement of a county office. It has been in county possession since 1933. But, placing it in such an undignified space, even temporarily, did not sit well with Army Col. John L. Moriarity (Ret.), president of the California Sons of the Revolution. President Moriarity, an attorney, began meeting with local government officials at city level (Pasadena, San Marino, and Westlake Village) and the county level to find a more appropriate space to display the ment of Military Veterans Affairs and incorporates a hall of military history. In addition to his leadership role in the Sons, John recently served as National Judge Advocate General of the Military Order of the World Wars. He joined the Army in 1948, served in Texas and Germany, then spent a career in the SJA Office. He retired in 1988.

The statue of Washington was adopted into the county's art collection in 2009 and was was installed in Grand Park, where it remained unmolested for eleven years. Then on Aug. 13, 2020, it was vandalized. On April 1, 2023, the statue was installed in the Lincoln Room of the Freedom Hall with a specially designed marble base to be added soon. Currently, the Dept of Arts and Culture is working with the MVA to develop a new plaque that will provide context of the statue's history.—compiled by Editor

D.C. Society Continues Traditions

he D.C. Society held its Annual Meeting & Dinner last December at a country club in Maryland. As is usual at this end-of-year dinner, the Society recognized the winners of its Annual Art in American History scholarship award. Thirty people attended, including three from the Corcoran School of the Arts & Design.

After dinner, President Carlton Hoskins handed the gavel to newly elected President Ed Rodriguez, who will lead the Society for the next two years. Additionally, the Society inducted five new members – Alex Azar, Kent Boese, Rory Hoyt, Tim Messman and Drew Peterson.

On Washington's Birthday, members of the D.C. Society assembled at Mount Vernon and laid a wreath at George Washington's tomb. After a brief ceremony, the D.C. Sons had lunch at the Mount Vernon Inn. Many of the members began their meal with a helping of hoe cakes – small cornmeal pancakes soaked in butter and honey. The cakes are said to have been George Washington's favorite breakfast.

In March, the Society held its Mess Dinner at a private club in the District. The dinner is a recreation of a military mess dinner and includes toasts to the Armed Services, the President of the United States as Commander-in-Chief and the Society's ancestors. The toasts were enjoyed with Madeira, a favorite drink of the American Patriots. The after-dinner speaker was Capt. Douglas "Sandy" Cohn, a West Point graduate, retired Army Ranger, and journalist, who had recently returned from a trip to Ukraine, where he consulted with Ukrainian officers and Western war correspondents. #### GA-SR Visits SCSR

On December 10, 2022, Region 3 General Vice President Frank Hardeman and General President Emeritus Mitchell Bush and their wives traveled to Charleston for the South Carolina Society's Evacuation Day black-tie cocktail. Held at the Porcher-Simonds House in Charleston, it was a chance for Region 3 SR members, new and old, to celebrate their patriotism and camaraderie. The reception was a splendid event and drew many positive comments.

The British took leave of Charleston on December 14, 1782. Gen. William Moultrie referred to Evacuation Day in Charleston as "the real day of deliverance and independence" for Carolinians. He could have included Georgians, too. The British occupied Savannah from late December 1778 to July 1782. In September of 1779, a joint American/French attempt to retake Savannah failed, with massive casualties to the patriot allies. In July 1782, British troops began filing out of Savannah, and Georgia's Royal Governor James Wright and other top officials fled to Charleston.

More Society Events

Following just over a month later, the Georgia Society held its 2023 Annual Meeting on January 13th at St. John's Episcopal Church in Savannah. The following officers were elected: Jim Smith, President; Chris Blaine, 1st Vice President; Marvin "Sammy" Strode, 2nd Vice President; Frank Hardeman, III, Secretary; Frank Brown, Treasurer, and Charlie Williams as Registrar. In addition to these, twenty-one others were elected to the Board of Managers.

In mid-February, the Society convened again for its annual George Washington's Banquet at the Savannah Yacht Club. State Representative Ron Stephens gave a talk on the issues and bills currently before the Georgia Legislature.

During the weekend of April 20-22, 2023, members of the S.C. and Georgia Sons gathered in Camden, S.C., to participate in the funeral service and reinterment ceremony for thirteen Revolutionary War soldiers. (See pp. 49-51 for more details.) Region III General Vice President Frank Hardeman and Chris Frame represented the SR from the Peach State. KYSR Sponsors Marker, Donates 'Berry Cannon'

On January 14, 2023, the Kentucky Sons gathered in Williamstown, Kentucky, for the Grant County Purple Heart Memorial Dedication. A Purple Heart Teardrop Monument sponsored by the KYSR, KYSSAR, and the local DAR Chapter was unveiled on the grounds of the Old Grant County Courthouse. It pays homage to the county's Purple Heart veterans from all wars, dating back to the Revolution.

Members, guests, and town dignitaries assembled for the unveiling ceremony, which included remarks from the Mayor and a musket salute by the KYSSAR Color Guard. Present were KYSR President and General Treasurer Buzz Carmichael, KYSSAR President Scott Giltner, and Kentucky DAR Regent Linda Conrad. During the same day, KYSR Historian Jackie Miller presented a small-caliber "berry cannon" to the historical William Arnold Log Cabin Museum, in honor of the memory of the town's founder and namesake.

Maj. Arnold was born in East Jersey in 1764 but later relocated to Virginia. By 1780, at 16 years of age, he volunteered for the Virginia Line, seeing action in the Southern Campaign. He was part of Lafayette's division of Virginia Continentals in the spring and summer of 1781. At some point during the campaign, according to family history, he and Lafayette became fast friends. He was also with Lafayette at Yorktown and suffered an injury there.

After the Revolution, Arnold moved to Kentucky and served in the militia for a number of years as Indians and settlers repeatedly battled each other. In 1790, he was part of a militia force that Secretary of War Henry Knox sent to defend Fort Washington, future site of Cincinnati, Ohio.

When settlers organized Grant County in 1820, Arnold served as the county's first sheriff. During Lafayette's tour of the United States in 1824-25, the famous general made a stopover in Williamsburg to see Sheriff Arnold while on his way to Cincinnati from Lexington. #### Celebrating Washington's Birthday

In late February, KYSR members and guests convened at the Lexington Club for the Annual George Washington Birthday Dinner. Again, the dinner was sold out and some, who nevertheless wanted to come, had to stand. "From a Society perspective, that's a good problem to have!" said KYSR

President Buzz Carmichael.

During the dinner, the Society heard a well-received presentation from noted historian, writer, and musician Ted Franklin Belue. A retired history professor of Murray State University, Ted spoke about his latest book published in late 2020, Finding Daniel Boone: His Last Days in Missouri and The Strange Fate of His Remains. He is a leading authority on Boone's life and legacy.

In addition to hearing about Daniel Boone, the Society also toasted the memory of George Washington. Members who were dressed in Continental Army uniforms led a toast to the Kentucky Society. —all text and photos submitted by Buzz Carmichael

LOUISIANA

Lithograph of Gen. Lafayette, c. 1830.

General Lafayette Returns

From July 1824 to September 1825, Gilbert du Motier, by then styled General Lafayette, came back to the United States at the invitation of President James Monroe for a grand tour of the country and stopped in every one of the twenty-four states then in the Union. The former marquis, who renounced that title in 1790, arrived in Louisiana aboard the steamboat Natchez in April of 1825.

His first stop was at the Chalmette battlefield, where the nation won its second War for Independence [War of 1812] against Britain. Assembled cavalry troops, cannon fire, and huge crowds greeted him. Later the general was escorted to New Orleans by Gov. Henry S. Johnson, former Gov. Jacques Phillippe Villeré, and Armand Duplantier, his old friend and aide-de-camp. When the procession reached New Orleans, a tremendous crowd greeted the general in the Place d' Armes (Jackson Square).

A massive but temporary triumphal arch stood tall in the square, and New Orleans Mayor Louis Phillippe de Roffinac welcomed Lafayette under it. Records indicate it stood sixty-eight feet high and fifty-eight feet wide and was ornately appointed. Colossal statues of the goddesses Justice and Liberty stood on either side of the entryway. Along the top edge of the arch, appearing in English on one side and French on the other, the following words proclaimed: "A grateful Republic consecrates this monument to Lafayette."

200 Years Later

Nearly 200 years after Lafayette's 1825 visit to New Orleans, again he returned to New Orleans in September 2022 in a presentation by Mike Duncan of his popular biography of Lafayette and The New York Times best-seller, Hero of Two Worlds, The Marquis de Lafayette in the Age of Revolution. The presentation was co-sponsored by the Sons of the Revolution in Louisiana.

The author presents Lafayette as a Revolutionary soldier, statesman, idealist, philanthropist, and abolitionist who fought for causes on both sides of the Atlantic Ocean. After he returned home, he was instrumental in the overthrow of the Bourbon Dynasty during the French Revolution of 1830. He died in 1834.

Duncan's 436-page biography is uncommonly coherent, consistently comprehensible, and engaging. Readers will appreciate Duncan's accounting of Lafayette's years in America. The review of Lafayette's actions from Brandywine to Yorktown is fascinating. The chapter on his triumphant return to America may be the most interesting.

As our nation's 250th anniversary approaches, the Sons of the Revolution in Louisiana will continue to sponsor presentations from leading authors and historians to keep the Spirit of '76 alive. —Text and illustrations submitted by Secretary William Allerton III.

2023 Annual Dinner Dance

In March of this year, the Maryland Society held its Annual Meeting and Dinner Dance. After the business meeting was held during which a new slate of officers was installed, members flocked to the cocktail lounge at the Maryland Club preceded by spouses, significant others, the Grey Goose and the Famous Grouse. About sixty people enjoyed fellowship and camaraderie, enhanced by hors d'oeuvres and good spirits for the next hour and a half.

Special guests Charlie Scammell, Region 2 Vice President, and his wife, drove down from New Jersey to attend. At 7:30 p.m. a drummer and fifer led the SRMD Color Guard in the presentation of colors while a live band played "The World Turned Upside Down." The Craig Satchell Swing and Jazz Ensemble then played the National Anthem upon posting of the colors. Reverend Thomas Davidson then gave the blessing, followed by a round of traditional toasts. The steak dinner was sumptuous and the servings were more than ample.

Attendees packed the dance floor the whole evening, except when the band took a break and new members were introduced and given their certificates, ties, and rosettes. Before the dancing resumed, Society President Tom Hosford thanked outgoing Board members and welcomed new officers and managers for the next year. After President Hosford's remarks, the party, touted by one attendee as the "best in years," was well underway.

The following individuals were voted into office for the year: Thomas R. Hosford, President; Harry T. Aycock IV, 1st VP; Daniel B. Fisher, 2nd VP; Daniel D. Evans, Asst. Treasurer; Eric A. Zetterberg, III, Secretary; Judson L. Smith, Jr., Asst. Secretary; James S. Hanna, Registrar; Talbot J. Albert IV, Asst. Registrar; Robert B. Carter, Historian; Russell P. Rich, Jr., Solicitor; Douglas C Borg, Asst. Solicitor; Rev. Thomas E. Davison, Chaplain; James G.

Bigwood, Genealogist; Scott Watkins, Capt., Color Guard, and Harding I. Smith, Asst. Capt., Color Guard/Webmaster.

The Society also voted in six at-large members of the board: William F. Yonkers, Thomas W. Frank, Thomas D. Jenkins, Samuel B. Hopkins, Jeffrey S. Wrobel, Jr., and Charles W. Morgan.

SRMD Visits Northern Shenandoah

Last November, several adventuresome members and their wives enjoyed an extended visit to the northern Shenandoah Valley, which included stops in Winchester, VA, and Harper's Ferry, WV. Trips Chairman Rob Carter planned and organized the outing. The purpose of visiting was to learn more about the northern valley and see sites related to colonial, Revolutionary, and Civil War history.

In Winchester, two prominent names from the Revolutionary War figure into its history: Brig. Gen. Daniel Morgan and Commander-in-Chief George Washington. The group made stops at Morgan's gravesite in Winchester Cemetery and at the house where he retired following the Revolution. We were treated to a private tour of the home by George Schember, who is the current owner and is president of the Winchester-Frederick County Historical Society. After the war, Morgan was elected a U.S. Representative from Frederick County. He died in 1802.

The tour also included stops at George Washington's Office Museum and the George Washington Hotel. From 1748 until 1758, George Washington spent more time in Winchester than any other place besides his home. He learned geography and topography there, led a militia from there, built and managed a fort there, and achieved political office while there. The George Washington's Office contains within it the small log cabin he used while Fort Loudoun was being constructed.

Apart from those sites, we also saw the homes of Winchester's first settler, Abraham Hollingsworth, and the town's founder, John Wood. At the latter location, there are several beautiful thematic gardens to enjoy as well as the family cemetery. We also took in the Museum of the Shenandoah Valley before heading off to Harper's Ferry. All in all, it was a terrific excursion. A good time was had by all, and everyone is looking forward to next year's trip to Williamsburg! – text and photos submitted by President Thomas Hosford.

Venue for the Society's Washington Birthday Luncheon

Washington Birthday Luncheon

The Michigan Society of Sons of the Revolution was pleased to host Thomas Smart, Deputy Governor General of the Order of Founders & Patriots of America, to address our membership at our Washington's Birthday Luncheon. The luncheon meeting was held at Brewster's Fine Food and Spirits at the Dyckman House in Paw Paw, MI. Tom explained that very recently the Founders & Patriots adopted some changes to the Society's criteria for membership. Essentially, if an ancestor of a current member of the Sons was a member in the Founders & Patriots, the Sons member can join the Founders & Patriots based on his ancestor's line. Several members of the MISR have now become members of Michigan OFPA, with more planning to join soon.

During the luncheon, Society President Geoffrey Hickok and others revived the scene of a toast which Benjamin Franklin gave at a diplomatic dinner following the signing of the 1783 Treaty of Paris. First, a French official rose, toasting Louis XVI, comparing him to the moon. The British ambassador then toasted his monarch, George III, likening him to the sun. Finally, the aging Franklin stood to speak on behalf of the United States. "I cannot give you the sun nor the moon, but I give you George Washington who, like Joshua of old, commanded both the sun and the moon to stand still, and both obeyed."

rhetorical question, regarding monuments: While many monuments have been raised to the Revolutionary War and to the individuals who fought in it, aren't you yourselves monuments to your own Revolutionary War ancestors? "You should always be proud of that fact and take that forward in your lives and act accordingly." While at the state conference, President Hickok presented a MISR membership certificate to C.A.R. member James Kraatz.

In other MISR developments, in May President Hickok attended the Michigan Heritage Days Conference in Midland, MI, and set up an information booth hoping to recruit new members or meet potential new members. He reports the Society will be hosting the Fall Michigan Heritage Days Convention.

Keith Graham Harrison

In Memoriam

The Michigan Society has lost several members in recent times, all of whom we honor and mourn, but the late Keith Graham Harrison deserves special mention. He served as a Michigan Society officer on numerous occasions, belonged to many hereditary and patriotic societies, was a devoted Civil War reenactor and a nationally recognized ecologist. He held a bachelor's degree in Fisheries and Wildlife Biology from Michigan State University and a master's in Ecology from Western Michigan University.

In his profession, Keith was a widely recognized ecologist and career civil servant, culminating as Director of the Office of Special Environmental Projects within the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality. He also served in executive-appointed positions of both the state and federal government. In the federal government, he participated in several National Academy of Sciences and U.S. Environmental Protection Agency Science Advisory Board committees as an invited ecology expert. His research resulted in more than 100 publications addressing a wide range of environmental and natural history issues.

Apart from his vocation, for thirty-three years of his life, Keith devoted himself as a Civil War reenactor and participated in over 550 reenactments and living histories throughout the United States. He traced his ancestry back to forty-seven Union Civil War soldiers, forty-two of whom served in Michigan regiments and five from non-Michigan regiments. He also had two ancestors who served with the Confederacy. Keith served as the Board President of Michigan's Grand Army of the Republic Memorial Hall and Museum (Eaton Rapids, Michigan) since its inception in 2013, Chair of the Michigan Civil War History Partners, and as Treasurer of the Friends of Michigan History.

He is survived by his wonderful wife, Jean Ann Harrison of Holt, Michigan, his son and daughter-in-law, Nathan Lewis and Sarah Harrison of Grand Blanc, Michigan, brother and sister-in-law, David Dale and Stacie Lyon of Stroudsburg, Pennsylvania, sister-in-law, Paula Harrison of Niles, Michigan, and numerous nieces, nephews, and cousins throughout the United States and in England.—all text and photos submitted by Society President Geoffrey Hickok.

Joint Luncheon and Election

Members, spouses, and guests of the Minnesota Societies of SR and SAR met for their Annual Meeting at Jax Restaurant in Minneapolis on February 18, 2023. Forty persons attended the joint function. The Minnesota SAR Color Guard presented the colors, and SAR President James Hagen led the Pledge of Allegiance. SR Chaplain Michael Swisher gave the invocation. With a quorum established, Michael Stain-brook, Vice-President of the SR, called to order the Sons of the Revolution portion of the meeting and presided in the absence of President James Foster.

The minutes of the Meeting held on 15 October 2022, to mark Constitution Day, had been emailed to all members and were approved as presented. The 2022 Treasurer's report was also accepted as presented. The only other item of business was the election and installation of officers and board managers for 2023.

Past President Geoffrey Bodeau presents the Society's Presidential Star, the badge of office, to incoming President Michael Stainbrook, Sr. In the background, Secretary/Treasurer Duane Galles looks on.-Photos submitted by Michael Stainbrook.

Following the separate business portions of the joint meeting, all in attendance then heard SR Secretary/Treasurer Duane Galles give an interesting and well-researched presentation on naming conventions and the cultural histories of names. The title of the talk was, "What's in a Name?" The SAR Society then presented Mr. Galles with the SAR Good Citizenship Medal. Following the presentation of his award, the Color Guard retired the Colors and the meeting was adjourned.

Annual Meeting & Historic Preservation Award

 $oldsymbol{\mathsf{A}}$  sizeable number of members and guests convened on Saturday, February 25, 2023, at the St. Louis Country Club in LaDue, Missouri, for the Missouri Society Sons of the Revolution (MOSR) Annual Meeting and Tribute to George Washington. MOSR President David Swafford welcomed all to the afternoon meeting that featured officer reports, the presentation of the Society's 2023 Historic Preservation Award, a fitting tribute to George Washington by MOSR President Emeritus and Secretary Rick Strelinger, and a showcasing of the Society's educational activity book for children entitled, "The Battle of Fort San Carlos at Saint Louis, May 26, 1780,"

This year's Historic Preservation Award went to Tandy

Christy Thompson, president of the board of directors of French Colonial America, owner-operator of the Centre for French Colonial Life in Ste. Genevieve, Missouri. Other special guests included Mary Hayward, President of the Chatillon-DeMenil Mansion Board; Kina Shapleig, President of Les Amis Saint Louis; officers and regents of the Missouri Society of DAR; officers of the Missouri Society of NSCDA, board members of French Colonial America, as well as Margaret Carr and James Donovan, previous recipients of our Historic Preservation Award.

Ms. Thompson oversees the properties and programs of the Centre for French Colonial Life. The properties include a museum dedicated to early French culture and history in southeast Missouri, three gardens, and five historic buildings that illuminate the unique architecture of early French builders in Upper Louisiana. Since the inception of French Colonial America in 2016, Tandy has led the board with vision, dedication, and purpose. Through her efforts to establish financial support, maintain the historic campus, and enable the facilitation of educational programs and community events for all ages, she has strengthened the public's awareness of, and interest in, the Colonial French story in southeast Missouri.

After Tandy's speech and the presentation of her award, Sumner and Sylvia Hunnewell introduced attendees to the Society's educational activity book, "The Battle of Fort San Carlos at Saint Louis, May 26, 1780." The Hunnewells' joint creation, the booklet presents the story of the only Revolutionary War battle fought west of the Mississippi and includes related word searches, crossword puzzles, quizzes, and coloring pages of historical scenes and historical figures. The GSSR has supported this project with funds from the Society of '83. The first printing was distributed to the Centre for French Colonial Life for direct sale to the public. All proceeds are going to the continual preservation efforts at the Centre. The Society especially thanks Rick and Peggy Strelinger for their efforts to organize and coordinate this very successful event.—Editor

The SRNJ Color Guard stands on the Princeton Battlefield during the "Experience the Battle of Princeton Reenactment" on January 8th, 2023, sponsored by the Princeton Battlefield Society. Following the reenactment, a Commemorative Wreath Event was presented to honor the soldiers who fought and fell in the battle. A reported 300 reenactors and over 1,000 spectators participated in the event.

SRNJ President Ben Strong, second from right, and the SRNJ Color Guard (Captain John McLean, Ned Rianhard & Dr. Kenneth McKeever) join forces with the New Jersey/Pennsylvania SAR and DAR to lay a wreath at the Battle of Trenton Monument on December 11th, 2022. The wreath honors the heroes of the Battle of Trenton (December 26, 1776).

The December 2022 SRNJ Holiday Luncheon, a Society tradition, was held at the Nassau Club in Princeton. The featured speaker was Arthur Lefkowitz, author of Washington's Revenge. The book focuses on the Forage War of 1777 and the British attempt to lure the Continental Army into a decisive battle in New Jersey. The author's talk was well received, and a lively question and answer discussion followed.

Rowan University Professor Jennifer Janofsky, director of Red Bank National Park, addresses the SRNJ 2023 Annual Meeting about last year's Hessian gravesite dig at Red Bank Battlefield, which uncovered human remains, possibly of Hessian soldiers. The other speaker was professional archaeologist Wade P. Catts, who directed the survey. In addition to the bones, other finds included a rare 1766 King George III gold guinea, five impacted musket balls, a knee buckle containing fabric and human blood, grapeshot, lead canister shot, as well as pewter and brass buttons. The Battle of Red Bank took place on Oct 22, 1777, at Fort Mercer, on the Jersey side of the Delaware River south of Philadelphia.

SRNJ President Benjamin Strong, center, presented four Society members with Certificates of Appreciation at the 2023 Annual Meeting luncheon. The recognition was for their collective work done in promoting the memory of Patriots who served in the American Revolution. #### N.J. High School Senior Earns History Scholarship

The Gen. Daniel Morgan Chapter of the New Jersey Society, based in Hunterdon County, has awarded a $1,000 scholarship to a New Jersey high school senior for his research into the American Revolution. Tannor Fitzpatrick, 17, son of Trevor and Nicole Fitzpatrick of Readington Township, earned the prize in an essay competition.

Tannor wrote an essay about George Washington and his troops crossing the Delaware River on Christmas night in 1776, which led to the attack on the Hessians camped at the Old Barracks in Trenton. At the time of the crossing, Hunterdon County encompassed both the Trenton battle site and the spot where Washington and his troops landed after crossing the Delaware River from Pennsylvania.

"It was the big moment of the war up to then, a turning point," Tannor said at the award presentation in March. "The Americans had had a long string of defeats. Many enlistments were almost up and Washington's troops were dejected. But this surprise victory renewed their hope. The battles at Trenton and Princeton showed that they still had some fight in them."

Members of the Sons want to increase interest in American history, especially among young people, said Chapter President Howard Moreau Thomas. "Americans today seem to concentrate on what divides us, rather than how much we have in common," he said. "The 250th anniversary of the Revolution is coming up soon, and we hope young people will discuss it – both good points and bad."

"I like researching history," said Tannor. "So many people don't know where we came from or how much effort went into it. Without that, we wouldn't have this amazing country."

"Given the landscape of social media and the amazing popularity of the hit musical Hamilton, we may expand beyond essays into other media," Mr. Thomas said. "We hope parents and teachers will talk to young people about both the Revolution and this competition."

That's how Tannor learned of the opportunity – word of mouth. His grandfather heard about the Sons' competition from a friend. A senior at Hunterdon Central High School, Tannor expects to attend Virginia Tech in the fall, to study finance and data science.

For ways to support and expand the essay competition or to join the Gen. Daniel Morgan Chapter as a full or associate member, contact Mr. Thomas at howardt4672@gmail.com.

The award was presented at Bonnell Tavern, in Clinton, NJ. It was in that tavern, in 1775, that New Jersey's first Minutemen assembled. The Bonnell Tavern, where Tannor Fitzpatrick received his scholarship award, has been a landmark in Clinton, since 1767. The Bonnell family operated it as a tavern from 1770 to 1870. In the latter part of 1775, N. J. Congressional delegate Charles Stewart called a meeting here to organize the region's first regiment of "Minutemen." By 1776, Stewart was colonel of the regiment and tavern owner Abraham Bonnell served as lieutenant colonel. Photo by Hank Bonnell.

Evacuation Day Dinner & Commemorative Events

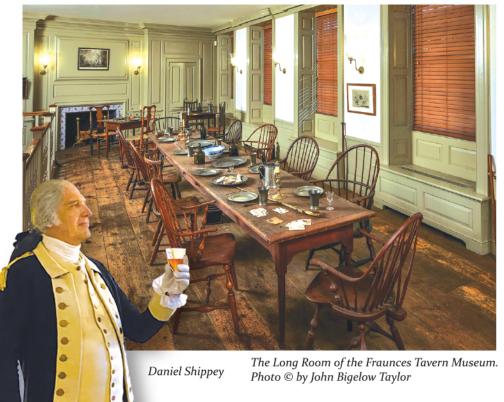

The Sons of the Revolution in the State of New York held its Annual Evacuation Day Dinner on November 21, 2022 at Fraunces Tavern, site of the original Evacuation Day Dinner hosted on November 25, 1783, by New York Governor George Clinton in honor of Commander-in-Chief George Washington. Members and guests replicated the Thirteen Toasts given in 1783. The Society was honored by the attendance of Consul General of Sweden Camilla Mellander, who spoke following the fourth toast, "To the King of Sweden."

Later in the week, members including President Peter Hein and Past President Ambrose Richardson participated in the annual commemorative lowering of the British flag and raising of the 13-star American flag at Evacuation Day Plaza, a few blocks from Fraunces Tavern. This event is organized by the Lower Manhattan Historical Association, of which the NYSR is an active participant.

Following tradition, the New York Society's Fraunces Tavern Museum again presented reenactments of George Washington's Farewell to His Officers in the Museum's Long Room throughout the day on December 4, 2022. The original farewell occurred 240 years ago, on December 4, 1783. The GW Birthday Ball was held at the Metropolitan Club on Friday, February 24th, to honor Washington and benefit the Fraunces Tavern Museum (see photos, pp. 39-40). David M. Rubenstein was given the Society's Distinguished Patriot Award for his commitment to patriotic philanthropy. On the Sunday following, the Society held its 133rd Annual Church Service at the Church of the Incarnation, during which we recognized all members who passed away in the year.

Annual FTM Book Award

On April 24, 2023, Society members and guests gathered to commemorate the Battles of Lexington and Concord, which took place on April 19, 1775. During the same event, the Fraunces Tavern Museum Book Award was presented. The award is presented annually to the author of the best newly published work on the American Revolution. Entries are judged based on original scholarship, insight, and good writing. This year's award was given to Eric Jay Dolin for Rebels at Sea: Privateering in the American Revolution. Honorable Mentions were awarded to Kenneth Scarlett for Victory Day: Winning American Independence, The Defeat of the British Southern Strategy and to Stacy Schiff for The Revolutionary: Samuel Adams.

Coming at the tail-end of April, the SRNY Color Guard participated at the 234th Anniversary Reenactment of Washington's First Inaugural, held April 30th and sponsored by the Freemasons of the State of New York. This event, which is usually held at Federal Hall, took place this year at the Grand Lodge building in Manhattan.

Author Eric Jay Dolin accepts this year's Fraunces Tavern Museum Book Award.

"Private Dining at Fraunces Tavern"

On January 21, 2022, Fraunces Tavern Museum opened a new permanent museum exhibition, "Private Dining at Fraunces Tavern," in the McEntee Gallery. The exhibition was curated by NYSR member and Museum and Art Committee Co-Chair Craig Hamilton Weaver. It portrays one of the Fraunces Tavern's private dining rooms in the late eighteenth century. Government officials, prominent members of society at large (including many of the country's Founding Fathers), and organizations such as private clubs and companies reserved the use of these private rooms. Samuel Fraunces was one of the first to offer delicious food, at any time of day, in an elegant setting with individual table service.

Additionally, the exhibition showcases the City's colonial "foodways" and their influence on the cooking at Fraunces Tavern. It also provides more information on the prominent individuals who dined at the Tavern during this period as well, underscoring Samuel Fraunces' superb cooking and culinary skills. A highlight of the exhibit is a gift of an eighteenth-century chest-on-chest, by long-term supporters Stanley and Elizabeth Scott. We are grateful that Stanley and Elizabeth were able to preview the new exhibition in person shortly before his passing at the end of January.

2022 Wreaths Across America

The SRNC is a co-sponsor of the Wreaths Across America Ceremonies at Raleigh National Cemetery. Each December on National Wreaths Across America Day, the mission to Remember, Honor and Teach is carried out via wreath-laying ceremonies at Arlington National Cemetery as well as at more than 2,100 additional locations in all fifty states, at sea, and abroad. The Raleigh National Cemetery has over 5,600 graves and each year we get enough wreaths sponsored to have a wreath on every veteran's grave.

Annually, the SRNC lays a wreath in honor of the Revolutionary War Soldiers who fought to create the United States. Our Color Guard closes out the solemn ceremony by firing a volley with Revolutionary period correct firelocks and going to "Morn Arms" as the trumpet plays "Taps."

This year we had seven members firing the volley in the uniform of the North Carolina Militia. There is something soul satisfying about having ten feet of flame and your own cumulonimbus, complete with thunder!

242nd Commemoration of Cowan's Ford

On a bright and crisp January morning, members of the SR, SAR, DAR & CAR gathered at the cemetery of Hopewell Presbyterian Church to remember the Battle of Cowan's Ford, the event that caused a slowing down of Lord Cornwallis's troops and exacted the high sacrifice of the death of the commanding patriot leader, Gen. Wm. Lee Davidson. Prior to giving honors at Gen. Davidson's gravesite, the gathering was treated to a program of a first-person portrayal of "His Excellency General George Washington."

Leadership of the meeting was provided by SRNC member Greg Catledge, who also serves as the President of the Mecklenburg Chapter, NCSSAR. In addition to Greg's leadership, SRNC member Russ McCullough coordinated the presentation of wreaths and the rendering of honors at Gen. Davidson's gravesite. John Misenheimer served in the NCSSAR Color Guard. SRNC President Gus Succop offered the morning invocation and expressed greetings on behalf of the Society. Bob Ray represented the Mecklenburg Chapter as Registrar.

George Washington Birthday Luncheon

The annual George Washington Commemorative Birthday Luncheon was a fine event with over thirty-eight members and guests in attendance. The luncheon was held at The River Run Country Club, Davidson, NC, through the kindness of SRNC member John Allen and his wife, Ann, members of the Davidson community and the club. Our speaker was Mark Pace, who informed us about John Penn, a NC signer of the Declaration of Independence. Also in attendance were Region 3 General Vice President Frank Hardeman, SRSC President Jeff Murrie, SRNC member and Mecklenburg SAR Chapter President Greg Catledge, and Professor Hugh Dussek, who assists us in the scholarship essay at Central Piedmont Community College.

Halifax Resolves Day

Members of the SRNC Color Guard (Dan Hopping, Captain) and President Gus Succop attended the commemoration of the 247th Anniversary of the Halifax Resolves. The April 12, 1776, resolution calling for independence from Great Britain was the first among the British colonies. It was followed by comparable proclamations by other colonies and culminated with the Declaration of Independence in July 1776.

The commemoration was organized by the NC SAR. SRNC President Gus Succop gave remarks and brought greetings from the Sons of the Revolution. In January, the SRNC entered into a partnership with Historic Halifax, located in Halifax County (See related story, pp. _____). ### 2023 PSSR Annual Meeting

The 135th Annual Meeting of the Pennsylvania Society was held Wednesday, April 19, 2023, at the 23rd Street Armory of First Troop Philadelphia City Cavalry. President Richard Francis Pagano called the meeting to order at 5 pm, and Color Guard Captain Robert J. McNelly led in presentation of the colors and recitation of the Pledge of Allegiance. The Necrology Report followed and was in turn followed by an update on the Pennsylvania Society of the C.A.R.

The Society was privileged to have as a guest speaker Friederike Baer, Ph.D., who informed the membership of her fascinating research into the participation of Hessian soldiers in the Revolution. Dr. Baer, who teachers at Penn State-Abington, is author of the book Hessians: German Soldiers in the American Revolutionary War, published by Oxford University Press.

Prior to adjournment of the meeting, Nominations Committee Co-Chair William Murray Gordon read the names of the proposed officers and managers, which the membership unanimously approved. The new officers are as follows: Richard Francis Pagano, President; William Frederick Forbes, Vice President; Kenneth Walter MacNeal, Vice President; Richard R. P. Di Stefano, Esq., Vice President; Wayne Ralph Strasbaugh, Esq., Vice President, and Christopher Michael Whelan, Vice President.

George Washington Birthday Ball

The RISR and Artillery Company of Newport celebrate George Washington's 291st Birthday on February 22nd.

Following a long tradition, the Rhode Island Society and the Artillery Company of Newport came together to publicly recognize George Washington's 291st birthday on Wednesday, February 22nd. The ceremony took place in Newport, on the South Porch of the Redwood Library & Athenaeum, where a bronze replica of Houdon's Washington stands. The Color Guard of the Artillery Company of Newport began the ceremony with a presentation of colors. Society President Roy Lauth then led a reading of Washington's Prayer and presented a wreath on behalf of the RISR. The Color Guard then commenced a ceremonial musket salute. A luncheon was held after the gathering to toast those who fought for the Patriot cause in the Revolutionary War.

Five Lineage Societies Host Joint Dinner

On Wednesday, May 3rd, five Rhode Island lineage societies including the Sons of the Revolution convened for a joint springtime dinner at the Squantum Association, a private club, in Riverside. The event was held to commemorate Rhode Island Independence Day (May 4, 1776) and to celebrate the 250th anniversary year of the Boston Tea Party. The evening's guest speaker was Paul O'Shaughnessy of the Boston Tea Party Museum in Boston. His presentation did not focus on the act of dumping the tea in the harbor, but on the much lesser known backstory. In his words, "moving past the whats and delving in the whys, meaning the root issues that drove the events of that night, how they developed over time and the enormous consequences that followed."

The five convened societies were: The RISR, the Society of the Cincinnati, the Order of Founders and Patriots,

New Siege Signage for Middletown

On September 18th, the Middletown Historical Society (MHS) and RISR unveiled a new historical signboard in Middletown that denotes in detail the facts surrounding the 1778 Siege of Newport, aka the Battle of Rhode Island. The RISR was a partner in funding the project. The MHS chose the literal center of the siege zone in which to place the new marker. As people read the sign, their backsides will be facing Patriot lines (located on Honeyman Hill) and the British lines will be out in front of them (located on Bliss Hill, overlooking Easton's Pond).

During the unveiling, MHS board member Christina Alvernas said, "It is our hope that by standing in this spot, history will come to life [for all those who read about the battle] and that the community will want to learn more about what happened here." She thanked the Rhode Island Sons for their support of the project as well as Mike Slein of the Newport Irish History Museum, who recommended the project contractor. The signboard is dedicated to the memory of Kenneth Walsh, Ph.D. (1938—2019), a founding member and past president of MHS, whose research uncovered the French origins of the fort on Vernon Avenue, the Redoute de Saintonge.

In 1778, Benjamin Franklin secured a mutual defense treaty with the French. Soon after, a plan was made to try and retake Newport from the occupying British forces. It would be the first Franco-American joint military operation, but bad weather and a breakdown of communications led to the unavailability of French forces. After a weeklong siege, the Americans retreated to the north side of Aquidneck Island before retreating to the mainland. The British attacked them in Portsmouth but the battle was inconclusive, although Britain remained in control of the island. John Sullivan.—compiled by Editor

Charleston Evacuation Day

The South Carolina Society Sons of the Revolution hosted a black-tie cocktail on the evening of December 10, 2022, to celebrate Evacuation Day in Charleston. The British evacuated Charleston on December 14, 1782. The event was held at the elegant Porcher-Simonds House on East Battery Street in Charleston. North Carolina Society President Gus Succop and Vice President Randall Sprinkle were present as invited guests, as well as Georgia Society members Frank Hardeman and Mitchell Bush. The cocktail was open to members and prospective members and their guests.

For many years, December 14th was a state holiday in South Carolina. When the British sailed out to sea that day, it ended more than two years of occupation. Revolutionary War Gen. William Moultrie referred to that day as "the real day of deliverance and independence" for Carolinians. Thus, another local term for the holiday was "Victory Day." (See related historical article, p 25.)

SCSR Assists Commission with 250th Anniversary

The South Carolina Society is assisting the local American Revolution Sestercentennial Commission with a weekly Facebook posting called "Pee Dee Patriots." Each week, Society President Murrie chooses a different Revolutionary War patriot from the Pee Dee region to feature on the Florence County 250th Commission's Facebook page. From there it is shared to the SCSR Facebook page.

The Pee Dee region, in northeast South Carolina, is named for a local Native American group. A large river by the same name flows over 200 miles, between both Carolinas, and empties into the Atlantic at Georgetown. General Francis Marion practiced his successful guerilla warfare against the British in the Pee Dee and Low Country regions of South Carolina.

Presenting Forgotten Founders to Schools

In early March, the SCSR hosted a public reception at the Florence County Museum to present the Revolutionary War history book which the Society is donating to schools in the tri-county area. A copy of Forgotten Founders is going to the libraries of forty different public and private elementary schools in Florence, Marion, and Darlington counties.

"The importance of making this book available to children ages 7-11 cannot be underestimated," said SCSR President Jeffery Murrie. "In reading the histories of the lesser-known heroes of the Revolutionary War, students can understand the impact that every person can make in the future of their community and the world."

As reported earlier, this is part of an ongoing initiative by General President Russell Rich to improve Revolutionary War education in all states where the Sons of the Revolution operate. ### 13 Revolutionary War Veterans Reinterred

During the weekend of April 20-22, 2023, members of the S.C. and Georgia Sons gathered in Camden, S.C., for an extraordinary event: a public procession, funeral service, and reinterment ceremony for fourteen Revolutionary War soldiers whose remains had been excavated late last year from very shallow locations at the 1780 battle site. The send-off event attracted thousands of people, including many from patriotic lineage societies, heritage organizations, and veterans' groups. Jeffery Murrie, President of the South Carolina Society, was named an honorary pall-bearer.

Archaeologists and anthropologists from the state and county levels, and from the University of South Carolina, uncovered the humbling finds from September through November of last year. Public Archaeologist James Legg and Research Professor Dr. Steven Smith led that project. The field team concluded that twelve of the fourteen were Continental soldiers from either Maryland or Delaware; one was a British soldier of the 71st Regiment of Foot (Fraser's Highlanders), and the other a North Carolina Loyalist of Native American heritage, possibly from the Lumbee Tribe.

"People visit battlefields like Camden, Cowpens and Kings Mountain every day and don't often consider that they are walking in unmarked cemeteries," remarked Legg. "The dead are still there. The work we are doing honors their sacrifice by shedding light on details that are not yet documented in the historical record and by providing them with decent marked graves for the contemplation of battle-field visitors."

Given the significance of the find, the South Carolina Battleground Preservation Trust, Historic Camden Foundation, and the Governor's Office stepped in to organize a proper and meaningful reinterment with full military honors for thirteen of the fourteen individuals. Researchers are still trying to lock down more verifiable facts about the Loyalist of Native American heritage before reinterment is arranged for those remains. Douglas W. Bostick of the SCBPT chaired the Steering Committee for this event.

On Thursday, April 20th, Army Humvees transported the hand-crafted coffins draped in flags from the State Capitol in Columbia to the Kershaw Cornwallis House in Camden, where they remained in repose until Saturday. A funeral cortege with mule-drawn caissons transported the coffins to the Bethesda Presbyterian Church on Saturday morning for an outdoors funeral service then to the Camden Battlefield for an Honors Ceremony. The procession was led by the US Army Old Guard, followed by 282nd Army Band from Fort Jackson, S.C., followed by the Color Guard of the NSSAR.

The funeral comprised a joint Anglican and Presbyterian service with eighteenth-century rites. It also featured a flyover of the US Air Force 79th Fighter Squadron from Shaw Air Force Base. Afterward, the procession commenced to the battlefield, where the coffins were placed on pre-constructed stands in front of the speakers' platform. Once the caskets were in place, a bugler played "Taps" and a bagpiper played "Flowers of the Forest."

Seven riflemen from the SC National Guard fired three volleys. The ceremony included remarks from several officials, the presentation of folded flags to representative dignitaries, and a flyover of SC National Guard AH-64 Apache helicopters. The remains of the veterans were later privately reinterred in the seven locations where they were found on the battlefield.

Rendezvous by the River

During the weekend of April 14-15, members of the Tennessee Society Sons of the Revolution (TNSSR) attended the 3rd Annual Tennessee River Rendezvous in Saltillo, Tennessee, just inside the northern boundary of Hardin County in West Tennessee.

The different wars represented included the Revolutionary War, War of 1812, the Civil War, and the two World Wars. The TNSSR set up a Revolutionary War-period campsite to host educational programming. On Friday, TNSSR member Bob Jones donned the attire of soldier-frontiersman-governor John Sevier. As Sevier, he addressed 400 local students about the early Watauga settlements of extreme northeastern East Tennessee.

He also related the story of the famed Overmountain Men and their march over the Blue Ridge Mountains to confront British Maj.

Patrick Ferguson and his loyalist militias. The march culminated in the Battle of Kings Mountain, which Sevier participated in and resulted in a significant victory for the Americans.

The students were very interested in the story of the early settlers as well as the Revolutionary War veterans. "Living history programs and venues provide a great opportunity to educate the public about our state's early history and the American Revolution," Bob said.

On Saturday, TNSSR member John Cooper the m presented his collection of contemporary long rifles to the general public and spoke about militia life as well as the artistic value of flintlock rifles. The event coordinator, Mike Fields, was very pleased with the participation of the TNSSR and will be in contact with us to schedule our attendance at the 2024 event.—submitted by TNSSR member Bob Jones.

2023 Washington Birthday Dinner

Our Society held its 126th Annual George Washington Birthday Dinner on February 25th at the Commonwealth Club in Richmond Virginia. The black-tie event was sold out early in February and attended by over 250 Society members. Our guest speaker was retired Lt. Col. Oliver North (USMC), who gave a presentation based on his 2019 book of fact and historical fiction, The Rifleman. Daniel Morgan was a sharp-shooting rifleman from the Shenandoah Valley of Virginia who with his company of expert riflemen kept the British from advancing toward Yorktown which prevented a land attack to the rear of Washington's troops thus aiding in the defeat of the British.

Other honored guests for the evening were Vice Admiral Thomas Wilson, USN (Ret.), Vice Admiral Andrew L. Lewis, USN (Ret.) Rear Admiral Robert P. Wright, USN (Ret.), Major General Robert D. Carlson, Major General Paul W. Brier, USMC (Ret.), Brigadier General Chad T. Manske, USAF (Ret.) and Rear Admiral Frederic du Rupilly, French Marine Nationale.

The Society grew by thirty-six new members in 2022, and more than twenty of them attended the dinner, where they were formally welcomed into our Society.

Virginia Society Stand of Colors

The American Revolution Museum in Yorktown Virginia is now the permanent home of our stand of fifty-six Revolutionary War flags. We added two new flags to our collection at the dinner this year which have joined the rest of our flags prominently displayed above the main entry to the museum, highly visible to all visitors from inside of the large reception area. The history of each flag will be displayed in a presentation on monitors mounted around the reception room.

Charleston's Evacuation Day

By Matthew M. Breen, Vice President and Solicitor South Carolina Society

The Evacuation Of Charleston by Howard Pyle (1898)

The 14th of December is an important date not only for Charleston, but for the entire South and deserves to be remembered and celebrated. On that day in 1782, the last of the British forces that had occupied the city for nearly three years made their final mass exodus. After many months of preparation, the remnants of Britain's southern army, including thousands of soldiers, loyalist civilians, and enslaved Africans, departed peacefully in a massive flotilla.

Maj. Gen. William Moultrie declared in his memoirs, "This fourteenth day of December, 1782, ought never to be forgotten by the Carolinians; it ought to be the day of festivity with them, as it is the real day of their deliverance and independence."

It was, in many ways, Victory Day for the entire region, and, one could argue, for nearly the thirteen states. Many people think that the American Revolution ended in October 1781, when British Gen. Sir Charles Cornwallis surrendered his forces to the Continental Army at Yorktown, Virginia. While that decisive battle ended Britain's dream of crushing the rebellion, it certainly wasn't the end of the war.

Aside from controlling New York City, the Redcoats continued to occupy parts of North Carolina, South Carolina, and Georgia. Thousands of people in these Southern states continued to endure violence, and the Continental Army continued to fight against the unwelcome occupation.

Action following Yorktown

While most Patriot soldiers quit the army and returned to civilian life after Yorktown, Gen. Washington sent Lt. Col. Henry "Light Horse Harry" Lee and Brig. Gen. "Mad" Anthony Wayne to South Carolina with their respective troops. They joined up with the men under Maj. Gen. Nathanael Greene, commander of the Southern Army, who had remained in the deep South after Cornwallis led his army to Virginia.

The British recalled Gen. Sir Charles Cornwallis and sent Maj. Gen. Alexander Leslie to Charleston inNovember 1781. British forces still held Savannah, Wilmington, and the area around Charleston from Johns Island to Monck's Corner. By Christmas, however, the Redcoats had control of only Savannah, the peninsula of Charleston, and a few bits of land east of the Cooper River. Over the succeeding months, Greene continued moving his headquarters closer and closer to Charleston.

When news of the American and French victory at Yorktown reached London in late 1781, it shook the British government to its core. George III, who had vigorously supported the war from its beginning in 1775, considered abdicating his crown. Public sentiment against the war, and the Tory government that supported it, rose to a climax. Four months after Yorktown, the Commons adopted a motion to suspend offensive operations against their former colonies in North America. In March of 1782, Lord North's government collapsed, and in April a new Whig govern ment under William Petty, 2nd Earl of Shelburne, began exploring negotiating for peace.

British agents reached out to Benjamin Franklin, then residing in France, and opened an informal discusion of a peace treaty to end the war. On certain conditions, the British agents stated, Britain might be willing to acknowledge the independence of the United States. Franklin rebuffed the overture, arguing that the United States had long ago declared and already won its independence. Negotiations could only begin when the British government was prepared to acknowledge this fact. The peace process cooled for several months.

Meanwhile, back in Charleston, Gen. Leslie in May of that year purportedly received secret orders from his superiors to abandon the southern states. On the 23rd of May, Leslie wrote to Gen. Greene, proposing that they should settle a cease fire agreement between their respective armies. Greene refused, stating that he had neither the orders nor authority to enter such an agreement.

Skirmishing for Food

The Southern Army was too small to launch a direct assault on occupied Charleston, but the feisty

A re-touched British army map of 1780. general intended to annoy and harass the enemy to the end. Under pressure from American forces surging into Georgia, British soldiers and loyalists retreated to Savannah in the late spring of 1782, and then evacuated that city on July 11th. Their areas of control had been whittled down to New York City and the peninsula of Charleston.

CHARLESTOWN,

As British supplies dwindled in the late summer, Leslie asked Greene to allow them to purchase food and firewood from the Americans. If this reasonable request was refused, Leslie warned, it would become necessary to take such supplies by force. Greene refused his request. True to his word, Leslie sent parties into the countryside to confiscate supplies, and General Greene sent American soldiers to check their raids.

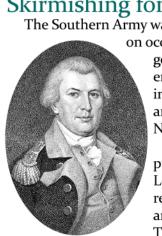

On the 14th of November 1782, Capt. William Wilmot of Maryland led a small band of Americans against a much larger British foraging party at Dills Bluff on James Island. Capt. Wilmot, and Lt. Moore, also of Maryland, and an enslaved man named William Smith were mortally wounded in the fight. These men probably represent the final American casualties of the War of Independence. As blood was being spilt on James Island in mid-November 1782, the British evacuation of Charleston was already underway.

The Coming Evacuation

To remove more than 14,000 people from the town, the British Navy had ordered a large number of warships, transport vessels, and support craft to rendezvous in Charleston harbor. As the autumn of 1782 progressed, British ships arrived and began taking on cargo. The Americans outside the town tried to pressure Leslie to prevent the removal of confiscated property, including enslaved people, but they were powerless to prevent the removal of a vast quantity of people and property.

Meanwhile in Paris, diplomats signed a preliminary agreement to end the war on the 30th of November 1782. Without settling any specifics, the British government acknowledged and recognized the independence of the United States of America. On the 5th of December 1782, George III announced to Parliament that a provisional peace treaty was signed and that he had instructed his agents "to declare [the colonies] Free and Independent States..."

When intelligence suggested that the British were nearing the end of their preparations for departure, Greene ordered the advance guard under Wayne and Lee to cross the Ashley River and investigate. During the late evening of Thursday, December 12th, and the early morning of Friday the 13th, they crossed into what is now North Charleston and marched south towards the British lines of fortification across on the Neck of the peninsula. Their orders were "to endeavour as much as possible to harass the retiring [British] garrison."

Maj. Gen. Nathanael Greene

Before any offensive operations began, however, a civilian named Maurice Simmons arrived from the town bearing a message from Gen. Leslie. He proposed that if the Americans would allow the British to withdraw from the town without harassment, and without any impediment, the departing troops would do no harm to the town. It was the same request Gen. William Howe had made to Washington prior to evacuating Boston. Like Washington had, Wayne readily agreed to the proposition.

The Last Blast!

The firing of a cannon on the morning of the 14th was the signal for Wayne to begin a slow march down the broad path, now King Street Road, towards the town. Just before 11 a.m., they reached the outermost fortifications across Charleston neck, approximately where King Street crosses Columbus Street. Meanwhile, the retreating navy had posted armed galleys in both the Ashley and Cooper Rivers, and these vessels rowed southward along the edges of the peninsula, keeping their watchful eyes fixed on the advancing American troops. British men-of-war stretched along the length of the Cooper River waterfront, with cannon loaded and matches lit, just in case.

Fortunately, the evacuation took place without incident. Marching down King Street, the weary soldiers found the town quiet and seemingly deserted. There were no fireworks, no rapturous crowds, no celebratory bands or streaming banners. Adhering to the last British command, the town's few remaining inhabitants stayed locked in their homes until the potential for danger had passed. It was not until later in the day that the townspeople began potential for danger had passed. It was not until later in the day that the townspeople began to feel relieved and began welcoming the Patriot army, the generals, the provisional governor, and others in authority.

The published memoir of Mai, Gen, William Moultrie contains a telling description of the events as of late.

The published memoir of Maj. Gen. William Moultrie contains a telling description of the events as of late afternoon: "It was a grand and pleasing sight, to see the enemy's fleet (upwards of three hundred sail) laying at anchor from Fort Johnson to Five-fathom-hole, in a curve[d] line, as the current runs; and what made it more agreeable, they were ready to depart from the port. The great joy that was felt on this day, by the citizens and soldiers, was inexpressible..."

On Tuesday, the 17th of December, 1782, the last vessels of the British fleet crossed the bar at the mouth of Charleston harbor and sailed away into the Atlantic. Life in Charleston, and the rest of South Carolina, very slowly returned to normal in the weeks and months to come.

Capt. Gustavus Conyngham (1747-1819), an Irish immigrant who arrived in the Colonies as a teenager in 1763, endured the same fate as many heroes of the American Revolution. After giving his absolute all for the freedom of his adopted country, performing feats no one else did, Congress denied the man his just rewards. Lacking proof of his commission as a naval officer, he died in relative obscurity and quickly faded from collective memory.

Despite those unfortunate circumstances, Conyngham's name has rebounded in the last century or more. It rightfully belongs in the same echelon as John Paul Jones, Esek Hopkins, and John Barry—or, for that matter, Henry Knox, Anthony Wayne, and Nathanael Greene. There was no other patriot or privateer who crossed the seas chasing the British as far and wide as Conyngham did and captured the amount of prizes he did. Nor was there a captain who irritated the British to such an extent.

In 1903, the Pennsylvania Society of Sons of the Revolution (PSSR) published a booklet on Conyngham's remarkable achievements, titled simply, Captain Gustavus Conyngham. It was written by Charles H. Jones, Chairman of the Society's Board of Managers at the time.

Incredible Achievements

From 1775 to early 1778, he targeted the English Channel and other watery peripheries of the British Isles. Those waters, according to the PSSR booklet, provided "the most inviting place for [that] kind of attack, but it was at the same time the most perilous, for these channels were narrow and these seas were limited in their area, and they were all carefully guarded by large, vigilant, and fully equipped English fleets."

Undaunted, Conyngham sailed boldly along the east coast of England into the North Sea and the region of the Baltic, and back again through the Strait of Dover, into the Irish Channel, and from there across the rough waters of the Bay of Biscay. Reports of his prizes were frequent. In part because of him, British shipping insurance rates jumped an average of 28 percent during the Revolutionary War. Britain placed five warships in the English Channel to stop him, but they were not successful. Some merchants were so fearful of losses they used French and Dutch shipping instead.

In March 1777, Conyngham obtained a commission as Captain in the Continental Navy from American commissioners in France. Two months later, he captured two British vessels in the North Sea and took them to Dunkirk, France—a mistake. Since France had yet to sign the alliance with the Colonies, British authorities quickly called it a violation of French neutrality, and the French were forced to confiscate Conyngham's commission and surrender it to the British. He was held in a French prison for some time.

Gustavus Conyngham portrait

Even that did not stop him. Assuming the role of a privateer, he was outfitted with another ship and continued to harass British shipping to every extent possible. Over the next eighteen months, July 1777 to February 1779, he operated around the British Isles, off Spain, and in the West Indies, where he took twenty-seven prizes and sank thirty ships. During the time he was sailing off Spain, funding from his prizes was given to John Adams, as the Congressman-and-diplomat made his way from Spain to Paris, France, to replace Silas Deane.

Back in the U.S.A.

In the spring of 1779, after Conyngham made his way back to the United States, he was apprehended by the British in New York. He was thrown into prison and soon transferred to England. There, bound in heavy irons, he was kept in a dungeon under deplorable conditions. After several attempts, he managed to escape in November of that year. He lived incognito in London for a time and enjoyed seeing prints of himself in shop windows. It was during this time the king wanted him hanged.

"When Congress heard that the English proposed to try Conyngham as a pirate," Jones wrote, "their Ministers were informed that he was a commissioned officer, and that three English officers had been placed in confinement [in America] to await his fate."

A report in Britannica Encyclopedia reports that he escaped the dungeon and fled to Holland, where in 1780 he joined John Paul Jones on the frigate Alliance. Later, after acquiring his own ship, he was once again found out, apprehended, and imprisoned. Finally, thanks to the intervention of George Washington and Benjamin Franklin, he was released in a prisoner exchange and sent home.

For the remainder of his life, he tried in vain to obtain his commission to hold Congress accountable for his share of the prizes he collected. A captain and crew under Continental Navy regulations were reportedly entitled to one-half the value of all goods onboard private vessels captured. Of that amount, the captain was to have one-tenth.

He never gave up hope that his commission would resurface. Following Benjamin Franklin's death in 1790, Conyngham's hopes became an obsession. Even in middle-age, he sailed again to Europe wanting to track down the commission. It was nowhere to be found.

His Commission Resurfaces

"Though he held a grudge against the government, he would continue to serve his country," writes Erin Weinman, manuscript reference librarian for the New-York Historical Society. "He was elected to the Common Council of Philadel phia and assisted in the defense of the city during the War of 1812. A true fighter, he never gave up his own personal fight over his commission, which continued on until his death in 1819." He was buried in his adopted hometown of Philadelphia, in the old cemetery of Saint Peter's Episcopal Churchyard.

Conyngham gravesite, Philadelphia

Weinman reports that toward the end of the nineteenth century, John Barnes, a naval historian and avid collector of Revolutionary War documents, while in Paris came across an advertisement for a print at the M. Charavay print shop there for 10 francs. Behold! It was Conyngham's original commission, signed by John Hancock, president of Congress.

YOUNG HEROES OF OUR NA

In 1902, Barnes published a book entitled, With the Flag in the Channel. "That bold Gustavus Conyngham was badly treated by his country and hardly handled by Fate the reader can perceive. He had helped the cause in the way it most needed help, but, notwithstanding, unrewarded, the man who flew the flag in the Channel went broken-hearted to his grave, and now out of the past too late, comes the authentic proof of his cause and asseverations."

In 1925, the commission found its way to the New-York Historical Society as part of the Naval History Society Collection. As Weinman writes, "Although it seems almost cruel that the document would be found years after Conyngham's death, it proves just how interesting a single document's history can be."

Although he wasn't properly reimbursed by Congress, since his death the U.S. Navy has named three destroyers in his honor. In addition to the destroyers being named after him, he is also the namesake for Conyngham Borough, Luzerne County, Pennsylvania, in the northeastern region of the state.

Treaty of Paris Bicentennial Inspires Postal Artwork

First-Day Covers of the Treaty of Paris Bicentennial Stamp

With this issue of SONS Drumbeat, we continue our examination of the Fleetwood Company's series of cacheted First-Day Covers (FDCs) celebrating the 1983 Treaty of Paris Bicentennial Stamp. In the last two issues, we looked at three FDCs that featured the artwork of Jim Butcher. Now we move on to other renowned artists Fleetwood contracted to lend their talents for the series, namely Shannon Stirnweis and David K. Stone.

Fleetwood was the largest producer of cacheted FDCs in the country at the time and was particularly known for including artwork of outstanding quality. The Treaty of Paris of 1783, signed on September 3, brought the Revolutionary War to an end and recognized the independence of the United States. —Ed.

Shannon Stirnweis

Fleetwood Company called Shannon Stirnweis "an imminently successful historical illustrator." The late artist, who succumbed in 2019, over the years produced images for Fleetwood that the company included in several new stamp series. As far as we know, this image of the three American negotiators of peace is the only artwork Stirnweis produced for the Treaty of Paris bicentennial stamp.

Left to right, it shows John Jay, Benjamin Franklin, and John Adams entering the Hotel d'York in Paris, where they signed the treaty that ended the Revolutionary War and recognized American independence. Franklin called the treaty "the greatest triumph in the history of American diplomacy." John Adams would probably have disagreed, given his own diplomatic success in the Dutch Republic the year before. Nonetheless he, too, was ecstatic about concluding the war. John Jay, for his part, not only contributed to the Treaty of Paris, but his namesake treaty (Jay's Treaty, 1794) curtailed at least for a few years the rekindling of hostilities between the United States and Britain.

Stirnweis wanted to be remembered most for his scenes of the American West. However, his talent bore out in various genres, including other facets of American history.

Born in 1931, Stirnweis had a long and varied career as an illustrator and fine artist. He began producing black-and-white illustrations for men's adventure magazines in the 1950s, eventually doing color covers for many glossy periodicals. By the end of his life, his illustrations could be found on magazine covers, postage stamps, movie posters, paperback books, as well as over thirty-five children's books. Toward the end of his life, Stirnweis published a memoir entitled, 80 Years Behind the Brush.

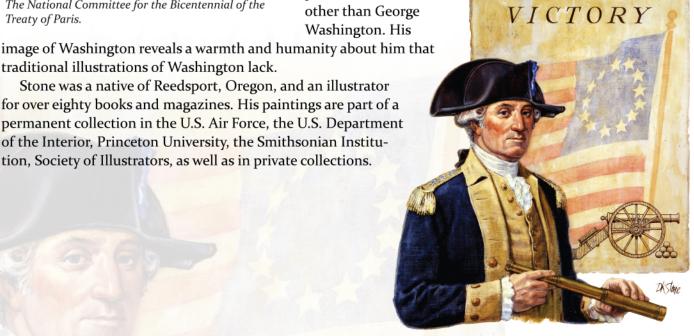

The National Committee for the Bicentennial of the Treaty of Paris.

David K. Stone

Fleetwood said of David K. Stone (1922-2001) that without question, he ranked as one of America's foremost artists. By 1983, Stone had already designed two United States postage stamps—the 1970 Fort Snelling issue, and the 1974 Fort Harrod issue. For the Treaty of Paris bicentennial stamp, Fleetwood hired Stone to produce a series of images that it would use on its cacheted FDCs. The series comprised portraits of great American patriots who contributed mightily to the achievement of independence, hence the name of the series, Champions of Freedom. Each portrait was printed on a postcard featuring the Treaty of Paris bicentennial stamp. In this issue, we begin with his first portrait in the Champions series, none other than George Washington. His traditional illustrations of Washington lack. Stone was a native of Reedsport, Oregon, and an illustrator for over eighty books and magazines. His paintings are part of a permanent collection in the U.S. Air Force, the U.S. Department of the Interior, Princeton University, the Smithsonian Institution, Society of Illustrators, as well as in private collections.
